

Manitoba Adult Language Training for Immigrants in the Biosciences Program Application

Eligibility Requirements

The Scientific and Technical English Language Training (STEL) is funded through the Manitoba Adult Language Training for Immigrants (MALTI) program. To apply, you must be a Permanent Resident, or Temporary Foreign Worker, or International Student, or Canadian citizen, currently reside in Manitoba, and are currently not employed. You must be trained in the area of biosciences as demonstrated by:

- Previous employment in bioscience* industry and/or
- Completion of academic and/or technical training in the biosciences.

For purposes of this program, biosciences include the following areas:

BioHealth – develop and commercialize innovations that allow for the early identification, prevention and/or treatment of costly and debilitating illness and disease. Includes functional (healthier for you) foods and ingredients and natural health products and the areas of digital health, medical devices, medicinal products, food processing and manufacturing, and dietary supplements.

AgBioTech - develop and commercialize innovations and tools related to agricultural plants or animals for the purpose increasing yields, production efficiencies and/or impacts, and/or improving nutritional profiles. Include the areas of plant genomics, precision agriculture, health treatments for animals, as some examples.

Clean BioTech -use materials from or with living organisms to generate new value-added products, with the goal to reduce negative impacts on the environment. Includes the areas of renewable fuels, industrial bioproducts, and bioremediation technologies.
